'Terror on a grander scale' The Guardian

RAINFOREST

BY MICHELLE PAVER

'Sinister, succulent, with a stifling sense of claustrophobia' Elaine Thomson

The story

Mexico, 1973. Simon Corbett, an English entomologist with a ruined career and a past he cannot face, joins an archaeological dig deep in the jungle. The forest is no refuge. His days lose their edges, footsteps follow that leave no trace, and something older than the trees is leading him off course. He came to the jungle to lose himself. He may get his wish.

What it does to an audience

'Rarely have I finished reading a book, immediately returned to the first page and started reading again. Rainforest is utter brilliance'
Carly Reagon

'With its vivid, brilliantly realised setting and creeping dread, I found this a truly terrifying read'
Rebecca Netley

'Incredible! Really was an experience like no other'
Reader review ★★★★★

'Michelle Paver at her terrifying best. A novel of masterful suspense and slow-burning horror'
Elaine Thomson

'The malicious uncanny slithers through the story'
Natasha Pulley

'Her most unsettling novel yet!'
Olivia Isaac-Henry

Made for the screen

Talk to Me 2022
A lead who cannot leave the dead alone, and may be the source of the horror.

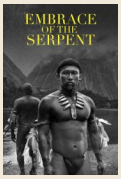

Annihilation 2018
A scientist with a private guilt, in a lush, wrong place where the days slip away.

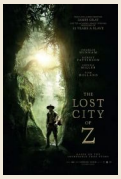

The Ritual 2017
An Englishman's guilt follows him into a forest older than memory.

The Terror AMC, 2018
A closed company of men, ignored warnings and a spirit world pressing in.

Embrace of the Serpent 2015
A Western scientist, an indigenous guide, a shaman and a sacred forest.

The Lost City of Z 2016
An Englishman with a name to redeem, a lost city and a jungle that keeps him.

The author

- More than three million copies of the Wolf Brother series sold
- Published in 36 languages in 37 territories
- Her ghost stories Dark Matter, Thin Air and Wakenhyrst have built a devoted adult readership

For television and film rights enquiries please contact Redhammer.

redhammer.info/michelle-paver